Walnut : remove a maximum of 20% of the canopy on an ongoing, annual rolling basis; i.e. prune little and often to reduce the risk of bleeding. Remove dead/damaged/diseased branches. Remove any water sprouts at the base of the tree. Remove any crossing branches rubbing together and causing entry points for disease. Remove upright vigorous shoots in the centre of the tree to improve light and air circulation through the canopy. Remove downward growing branches low on the tree to a more upward growing branch, to improve light and remove danger of injury to persons in the garden. Shorten previous year's growth on each main branch by 1/4 to 1/3 to encourage branching and formulation of fruiting spurs. Reduce excess height by shortening larger branches by up to 1/3 to make it less difficult to pick fruit and because the tree is outgrowing available space.
